

Preservation Enclosures for Rare Materials

School for Bookbinding Arts

at Cat Tail Run Hand Bookbinding

October 19, 2016 Cost: $205

Wednesday

The four-flap enclosure (pictured on this flier) is a key component for anyone wishing to create effective housings for fragile materials, including books, pamphlets, and catalogs.

This one-day course teaches the construction of the four-flap enclosure as well as a number of structural variations that prove themselves useful in protecting a wide range of archival materials.

Also included in the class are sources for both materials and ideas for creating effective preservation enclosures that do not require an extensive amount of equipment.

This class is geared toward anyone wishing to improve the storage options for rare collections, whether they be institutionally or privately held.
